Where Tradition and Technology Meet

Roehl Acres & Rustic Occasions

Roehl Acres of Loyal is owned by Dennis and Suzie Roehl where they have a dairy farm with their children. The Roehl's purchased the farm in 2005 from Dennis' parents, Lowell and Velora. Lowell still helps with the fieldwork. Dennis and Suzie's children, Devon, Jackson, and Kathryn make the third generation on the farm.

Along with operating the farm, Lowell's brother Erlin and his wife Bonnie Roehl and their family started an event barn up the road to help bring in additional revenue. The event barn, Rustic Occasions, is operated by Doug and Kim Roehl. "Small farms are becoming a thing of the past and people are looking for ways to convert their farms into other forms of income," Erlin said.

Roehl Acres' registered dairy herd is milked daily in an over 100-year-old stanchion barn. Even though the barn may be considered old technology, it is working at peak efficiency, with the family milking three sets of cows in the barn twice a day.

"In 1983, I went to my first Farm Progress Days Show. I was 14 years old and I thought it was the greatest thing I had ever been to. Now, 36 years later I will be the host farm for Farm Technology Days 2022. In a way, I have been preparing for this all of my life." Dennis said.

Clark County, Where Tradition and Technology Meet

Clark County is home to many farms with a diverse variety of products being produced. Along with the diverse agriculture it has to offer, it also has a 155-acre park dedicated to the Wisconsin Vietnam Veterans Memorial Project called The High Ground. The county is also home to a large population of plain faith community. It is common to see horses and buggies traveling the rural roads of Clark County or horse drawn equipment working the fields. This county really does bring together tradition and technology. To highlight a few larger agribusinesses, we look toward Grassland Dairy Products, which has been creating dairy products since 1904 and still offers a wide range of reliable and nutritious dairy products. Also, Meyer Manufacturing Corporation which was founded in 1944 and has continued to expand its facilities while implementing the latest technologies into superior product designs.

Clark County has a lot to offer and the executive committee is excited to welcome you into this diverse landscape.
